The REFLECTIONS OF A KNOCKER

-- About Spring Poetry. BY JOHN KENDRICK BANGS.

[1] 'LL TELL you one thing, Knock-! er," said old Mr. Redface, at the Growlers, the other day, "the trouble with fellows like you is that you knock other people and never do anything constructive yourselves. It's a darn sight easier to pull down another fellow's work and tear it to pieces than to build up something that will take its place. Modern criticism is destructive and not constructive."

"It can't help itself as a rule," reiorted the Knocker. "For instance, when you and I tear to pieces the work of the president in connection with San Domingo, nothing would please us better than to provide a better policy, but they won't let us. If we paid our own ter than to provide a better policy, but they won't let us. If we paid our own fare to Washington and offered to take the president's job off his hands we'd be spotted by the secret service people and hauled off to jail as a pair of cranks. Same way with the stage. I may be able to knock a dozen Hamlets to smithereens, but if I went to a manager and said, 'See here, put me on the boards, just for one night, and I'll give you a melancholy Dane from Danesville that'll put all the others to sleep in a minute,' he'd laugh me out of his offer. That's how the milk gets into that cocoanut, my boy We hammerers would be constructive if we could, but the fellows in charge won't let us. Even more influential critics than warreness. let us. Even more influential critics than we are suffer from the same condition. There's the editor of the Evening Ghost, who could run this country better with his eyes shut than anybody in Washington, but the Washington chaps, instead of calling his bluff by turning their work over to him for a week or two keep right on deing the by turning their work over to him for a week or two, keep right on doing the wrong thing day in and day out, just as if Mr. We never existed. Same way with the railroads. Every Commuter on the P. J. & X. Y. Z. could manage the suburban service of that railway better than the president, general manager or third assistant deputy fourth vice president who have the commuters in charge; but not for one day in any known war will any one of them permit Mr. Commuter to control affairs. Therefore, your criticism of modern criticism doesn't cut enough ice to mix a cocktail with."

face.

"Oh, I don't know; maybe not," said the Knocker. "Only you must not blame us who are on the outside hecause we pull the fellows on the inside to pieces and leave 'em scattered the place instead of putting better than your content to be the place who was those we know not of your poetry, old man spoke. There are we destructive criticism."

all over the place instead of putting 'em together again."
"Take your criticism of spring poets," said Mr. Redface. "How about that? Nobody's preventing you from showing what you can do. I haven't heard that Edwin Markham has got out an in-junction in the federal courts restrain-

When a "Hercules" boy is out on pleasure bent and the clouds commence to gather black and drizzle rain, does his mother worry about his getting wet to the skin? Never; she has no occasion to; she knows that he will stay out in the rain, that's boy nature, but she knows, too, that he is wearing a "Hercules" shower-proof suit.

Our claim that a "Hercules" boys' suit is shower-proof isn't an advertising dodge; it is a fact.

If a manufacturer can waterproof that usage proves shower-proof, why can't we do the same thing and cut up the cloth in Boys' Suits? That's just what we do. The cloth we use in Boys' "Hercules" suits is put through the rain-coat shower-proof process before we make it up; then why isn't a "Hercules" Boys' Suit

In fact a "Hercules" suit is more thoroughly shower-proof than most rain-coats, especially the cheaper kind; the cloth is better quality, closer woven and ALL WOOL.

"What do you think of that?"
"Rotten," said Redface, promptly

"Perfectly rotten."
"That's just it," said the Knocker.
"You jump on me for being destructive, and when I am constructive you say my stuff is rotten, although as a matter of fact that poem of mine is hygien-ically perfect, moral, and based upon everlasting truth. No man who reads that and lays the truth of it next his that and lays the truth of it next his soul is going to be caught out in the April blizzard without an overcoat, or with his summer flannels on, just because it's springtime, and yet you say it's rotten. I suppose you'll say my

O joeund, joeund May,
It really seems to me.
There is not much to brag of
In thy joeundity.
What tho' thou bringst the bluebird
With carollings to man,
Dost thou not also bring along
The pirate moving van?
What of thy restless swallows.
That build in vender ash.

What of thy restless swallows. That build in yonder ash. Dost not thou bring him also who Our crockery doth smash? Why brag of golden buttercups And long, lush grassy greens, When he who knocks our furniture To smithercens. Doth prance upon the highway By sea and grassy down. From Ponkapog to Pittsburg. From Hull to Waiertown? To read the poets one would think Thee harbinger of joys. And free from every little pest The Soul of man annoys. And free from every little pest. The soul of man annoys. But I, I know thee well. O May. I've got thee straight and pat. For I've just had to move from one into another flat; And as I sadly gaze upon. The ruin wrought today. I'd change thy name instanter so. That it would spell Dismay.

"I crawl," said Redface. "I crawl.
Never again will I complain that you are merely destructive."
